Perpetrators continue to step up their game, hoping to make people's lives miserable. One new tactic criminals are using is called a "Tech Support Scam" which involves scammers who use scare tactics to trick you into unnecessary technical support services to supposedly fix a device or software problems that don't exist.

At best, these scammers are trying to get you to pay them to "fix" a nonexistent problem with your device or software. At worst, they're trying to steal your personal or financial information; and if you allow them to remote into your computer to perform this "fix," they will often install malware, ransomware or other unwanted programs that can steal your information or damage your data or device. Did You Know? INFORMATION

Get the Right Home and Auto Insurance Coverage to Protect Yourself! Get a FREE TruStage[®] quote today!

Vehicles and homes have typically been the average consumer's most valuable assets. With drastic increases in worth over the past year, that's even more true than in the past.

Although housing prices have had a largely upward price trajectory since the 1960s, they've taken a bigger-than-usual jump since 2020¹. And thanks to chip shortages and high demand, prices on both new and used vehicles have increased faster than consumer prices overall (and those went up a hefty 7% from 2020 to 2021 — the largest year-over-year increase since 1981)².
